BARNARD COLLEGE

VOL. LXXVII

Dear Dean Breunig,

For teaching "la langue francais" . . .

For fostering and encouraging student-faculty communication . . .

For lending a hand and a sympathetic shoulder . . .

For tackling a trying but much appreciated job as Dean of Faculty . . .

and For Being Very Special . . .

We dedicate this book to you.

With Many Thanks,

The Class of 1971

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY, NEW YORK 10027

To the Members of the Class of 1971:

As you finish your studies at Barnard, I am reminded that we entered the college together in the fall of 1967.

The past four years have not been easy ones for any of us but they have been important and exciting ones for the college collectively and for each of us individually. Since September 1967 we shared the turmoil of Spring 1968 at Columbia and the crises of Spring 1970 in the nation. In a happier side we have shared a time of expansion and physical improvements at the college. During your time here Barnard increased not only its residence spaces but also the type of living options it offers students. Altschul Hall and McIntosh Center were opened and the renovation of Milbank Hall begun. The Barnard curriculum, continuing in the tradition of excellence, has been expanded to include new and vital courses. Many of these courses grew out of student concern and were planned with student assistance. Our relationship with Columbia has been defined to the extent that more courses "across the street" are open to Barnard students.

But the real meaning and value of these years cannot be listed collectively. The importance of our time at Barnard lies in our individual experiences and accomplishments, both academic and social, and in what each of us has been able to learn and to take from this time and these events.

We have shared an exciting four years together. As you leave Barnard to begin a new way of life, I hope that you will continue to share with us in the future development and excellence of the college you have helped shape during your time here.

You have the best possible preparation for your future--I look forward to hearing about your immediate and your long range accomplishments.

Cordially,

Martha Peterson

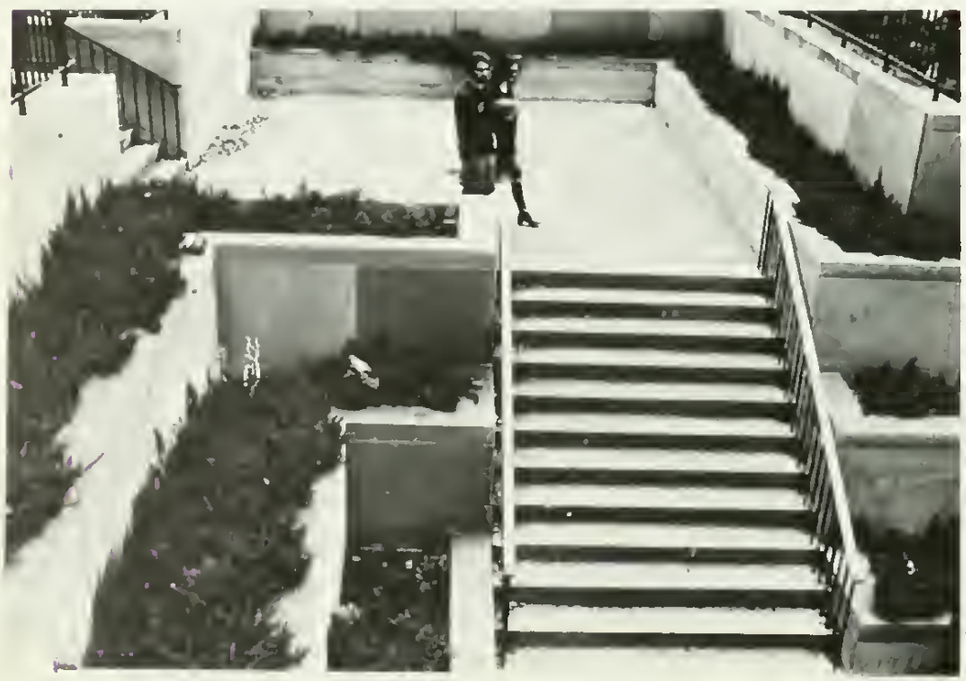
CONSERVATION PROGRAM

Conservation has traditionally been synonymous with nature, scenery and the preservation of beautiful things. Few people, though, recognized that Conservation was something far more meaningful in its closeness to man's supporting systems than was previously thought. But in 1970, with the deterioration of urban and rural America so painfully obvious, environmental issues have become the rallying cry of many people other than the Garden Clubbers and bird watchers. The "movement" reached "fadism" proportions as the Earth Day celebrations took everyone into the streets parading (and littering) for the environment.

Professors Sharp and Ritchie, and soon after Professor Zobler, who now heads the program, saw the need for conservation study, and consequently, in 1952, they established an interdisciplinary program of Conservation of Natural Resources at Barnard. At first, few women elected conservation as their major, but the program continued to expand. This departmental growth when compounded by the progressive deterioration of the quality of the surroundings, encouraged more students to participate in the program and thus to justify further expansion. Last year, through the efforts of a departmental committee and Mrs. Hersh, the Environmental Conservation and Management Program was awarded $50,000 from IBM. This gave the program the much needed base on which to accommodate growing student interest, the need for new courses and more faculty members.



The smallness of the program creates a closeness between the students and faculty. This is vital to learning and to making decisions necessary as participants become more intellectually involved. Ideas, goals, and plans can find various backboards against which to play their views. There are a few basic courses, General Biology, Ecology, Environmental Science, and Conservation Theory, as requirements, and then many electives. The students then choose concentrations — biologic conservation, pollution control, regional planning and management studies to name a few. The ample number of seminars and colloquims gives the program the flexibility required to adapt to varied interests. Each student must pave her own way, though this is somewhat facilitated by the nature of the study which leads to practical action and/or a profession which gives relevance and coherence to the chosen concentration. It is more than an intellectual exercise for the course of study has implications far beyond the limits of college life.

The interdisciplinary design of the program intends to give the student a perspective of the social, economic, and scientific ramifications of the issue. It prepares her to go out into the field and work with agencies, planning boards, pollution control groups or to go on to graduate study. The program is experimental and innovative but has been well received by those who have had training in more specific fields (soils, wildlife, management, field biology). The program is seen as answering the need for a synthesis of attitudes and conditions which encompasses the physical and behavioral sciences, understands their inter-relatedness, and can apply the necessary standards and practices to insure a quality environment which can function with stability.

McIntosh Center created an entirely new atmosphere at Barnard. Suddenly there was one central place on campus in which activity flourished, fun was abundant, excitement was generated, and good times were the rule. Much of this aura was engendered by the McIntosh Activities Council. Originally set up as two separate committees — one for social and one for special events — the Council developed into a full-fledged college center organization. At present the council is composed of seven different major committees — i.e., the Social Events, Special Events, Films, Speakers, Student-Faculty, Monday Evening Speaker-Dinner Program, and Recreation Committees. As indicated by the variety of committees, the Council prides itself on diversity. Events include such regular features as Monday and Thursday night films, Thursday night Open Houses, TGIF's, monthly speakers, weekly duplicate bridge nights, co-ed bowling, Monday evening dinner hour speakers, and student-faculty coffee hours. Special events also cover a wide spectrum ranging from ski trips, dance series, concerts, poetry readings, a St. Valentine's Day Massacre Mixer, square dances, an Oldies Marathon Dance, a faculty-administration art exhibit, green beer on St. Patrick's Day, Belgium waffles, and crepes brunches, an outdoor barbecue, a cherry pie eating contest on Washington's birthday, to a spontaneous outdoor afternoon of Sangria and balloons on the first day of spring!

But more than merely presenting various events, the Council has attempted to cultivate a warm and open atmosphere in the center. It is a young, growing, flexible and pragmatic group. It thrives on the unique and is receptive to ideas from any member of the Barnard Community. Its theme? "McIntosh Center — Bring a friend or find one."

BARNARD WOMEN'S LIBERATION

Barnard Women's Liberation formed as a group in the fall, 1969, with the dual purpose of taking aetion on eollege and eity-wide issues, and of raising the eonseiousness of students to feminism. A petition signed by over half the student body demanded a gyneeologist, a protest against Glamour magazine model reeruiters, a Ladies Home Journal sit-in and August supplement, rap groups, feminist theater, a Mareh 28 abortion demonstration, the Rules, and the Strike. BWL either worked alone or joined forees with other campus and eity groups to aet on speeifie grievanees and bring greater awareness of the Women's Liberation movement and its goals to Barnard.

After the Spring '70 Strike, BWL, with several other college groups, formed the Barnard Aetion Coalition and kept open an offiee in MeIntosh during summer vaeation. The tangible result of the summer's work was Reorientation '70 a booklet presenting Barnard Aetion Coalition's view of Barnard life, whieh was distributed to all students in the opening weeks of the '70-'71 year.

The Barnard Bulletin invited the opinions of BWL, and eonsequently BWL members wrote weekly eolumns presenting their views, as well as news stories and features on abortion, birth control, books, movies, and the Women's Liberation movement. In December, BWL wrote the Barnard Bull, a four-page spoof whieh ran inside the Bulletin.

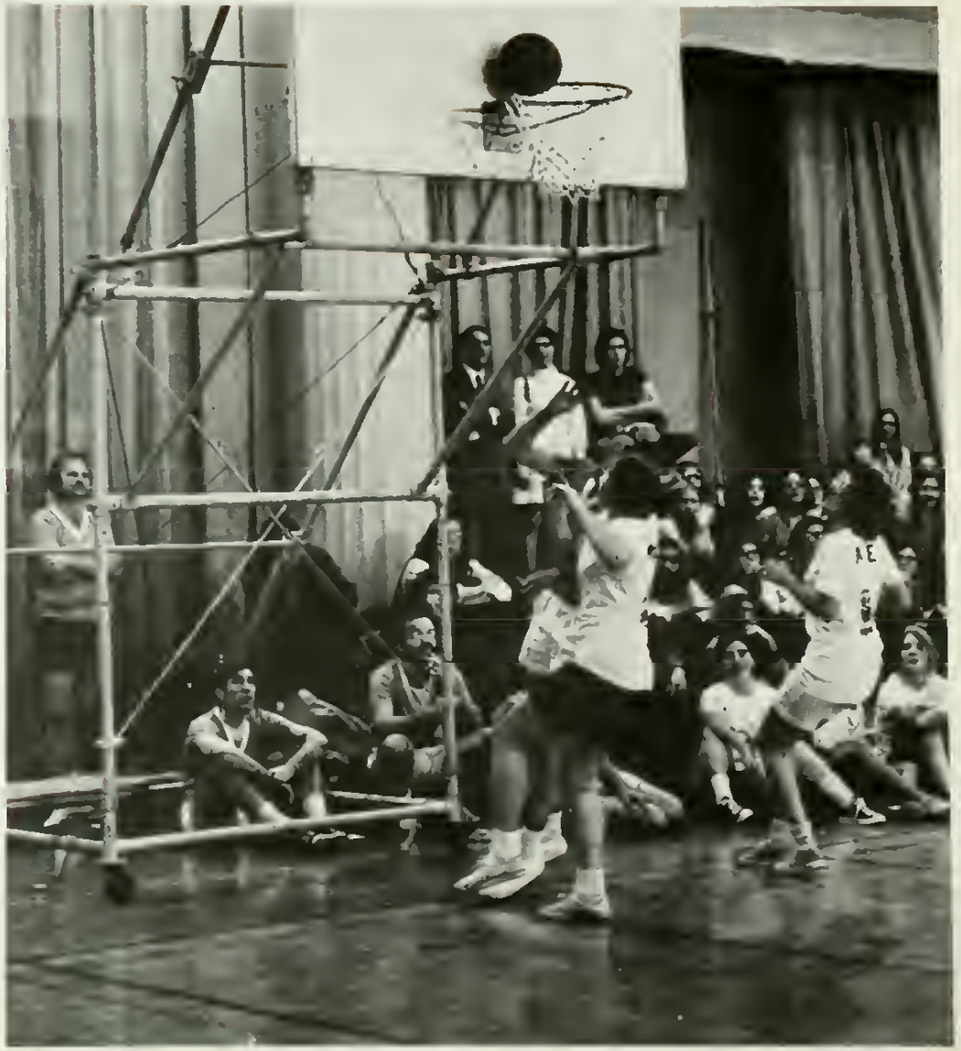
The Bull kieked off Women's Liberation Week, whieh BWL eo-sponsored with Columbia Women's Liberation and Sisters In Struggle in order to bring more eampus women into the movement, and to publieize the Deeember 12 demonstration for free abortion and free child eare. The eight-day Week reeeived eity-wide attention and ineluded a demonstration against an abortion referral serviee later investigated by the N. Y. tives from the Women's Strike Coalition and the Phoenix Organization of Women (POW), a speech by Betty Friedan that drew an overflow crowd, a basketball game with the male faculty, films and rap sessions.

In January the group instituted its Male Chauvinist Pig of the Month Award for "those swine who demonstrate sufficient pignacity to arouse the normally good-natured and tolerant Barnard Women's Lib Chapter."

At the start of spring semester BWL co-sponsored with Columbia WL a two day state-wide Women's Liberation Conference. The weekend of March 6 and 7 brought high school and college students, as well as other women in the Movement, together in small workshops and larger assemblies.

BWL also worked with other feminist groups to build a demonstration in late March at the State Legislature in Albany protesting the attempts of senators and assemblymen to put further restrictions on N. Y. abortions, and demanding total repeal of all abortion laws.

BWL continually tried to point out the existence of discriminatory attitudes toward women on the Barnard campus, and more importantly, on all levels of human participation.



THE COMMUTER AT BARNARD

You see her sitting at McIntosh, sleepily drinking a cup of coffee at 8:45 A.M. She's the one who carries an umbrella on a sunny day because the seven A.M. weather report predicted rain. You'll know her by those tell-tale glances at her watch; she doesn't want to miss those great subway connections that once got her home in 73 minutes. Who is she? Why, the Barnard commuter.

Fully one-third of Barnard's 1934 students are classified as commuters. Some are content to commute, finding a 24-hour a day college atmosphere overpowering and somewhat unpleasant. Most of them, however, would like to live at school, but due to lack of housing, must put their names on a waiting list and continue their daily odysseys until their turn comes.

Why does the New York City woman pick Barnard? There are several reasons. For some, only by living at home can they afford to go to a school with a tuition well over $2,000 per year, and the idea of the New York State Regents Scholarship is inviting. Those who wish to take advantage of this source of funds and yet go to any ivy league school have two choices: Cornell or Barnard. Many choose Barnard. Then, to some women, the pace and excitement of the city as opposed to a pastoral campus is the deciding factor.

Commuter Action, an organization formed to improve life at Barnard for dissatisfied commuters, intends to encourage solidarity among commuters. It may sound trite, but "united we stand, divided we fall" has a great deal of merit. By standing as a group, commuters will hopefully be able to accomplish a great deal more.

More tangible aims of Commuter Action include the establishing of a Barnard off-campus housing registry or the opening up of the Columbia off-campus housing registry to Barnard women. This will aid those Barnard students, both commuters and residents, who wish to find apartments. Commuter Action also intends to investigate possible locations for a new dorm or '616' type residence. While Commuter Action recognizes the financial bind facing colleges, members would certainly aid in raising the money to finance such a project. Commuter Action also feels certain that alumnae who were classed as commuters would be more motivated to contribute money to Barnard if at least part of it were going toward a new dorm. The life of a commuter may at present be unrewarding for some, but with the solidarity of commuters, the future of the sleepy, coffee drinking, umbrella carrying Barnard woman seems promising.

DORM LIFE

The Brooks-Hewitt-Reid dormitory complex houses approximately 500 girls in single and double rooms. There are few, if any, residents who do not have strong opinions of one kind or another concerning dorm life. As is the usual situation, many complaints are voiced. However, there are very tangible advantages to living in the dorms. They are located directly on the campus. This makes it easy for students to get to classes given on the Barnard campus. A network of tunnels connects all campus buildings, except Milbank Hall, which is appreciated in inclement weather. The dorms' convenient location helps minimize the dangers of the city at night, but there are also certain disadvantages to living in BHR. The one about which students are most vociferous is the infamous meal plan. A resident of the complex is compelled to subscribe to the plan, which provides only fifteen meals a week. On weekends girls must provide their own food. The major complaints against the meal plan concern its restrictions, but one thing must be said: the Food Service occasionally concocts some pretty ingenious dishes.

Plimpton Hall, situated on Amsterdam Avenue at 121st Street, is the newest dorm and houses 280 upperclassmen. A much desired dorm by Barnard girls, Plimpton is composed of modern suites similar to private apartments. Each suite houses five girls in single bedrooms with a communal kitchen and eating area. The main floor has a colorful television room, lounge and reception area. It is not uncommon to have dorm-sponsored study break snacks at night or free popcorn to be grabbed by the handful as the girls rush through the doors on their way to class. Parties, movies, and socials are scheduled frequently and are well attended.

"616" located on 116th street and Claremont Avenue, houses approximately 270 girls. Resembling Plimpton in structure, "616" is composed of suites containing double and single rooms. "616" has the additional advantage of its close proximity to both campuses. There is a quiet study lounge on each floor in addition to the lounge on the main floor. Sunday brunches, which are given quite frequently, offer bagels, tea, coffee and warmth. Equipped with most cleaning facilities including a laundromat, "616" is quite self-sufficient.

The Fairholm, on 121st Street, is the commuter's life saver. Although severely, and perhaps justifiably, criticized by its residents for its lack of facilities, limited visiting privileges, and handful of elderly residents, many a tired commuter has happily consented to accept a room near campus and end her daily subway expeditions.

But what is life in the dorms actually like? It is difficult to describe dorm life. Because each dorm has its particular character, and each student her own individual personality, dorming experiences differ. Some residents enjoy dorm life, others do not. Some floors may be very quiet, others excessively noisy; some friendly, others impersonal. Whereas it is not uncommon to see late evening jam sessions held on floors, neither is it unusual to see long corridors with tightly shut doors. No matter what particular style of dorm life the Barnard resident encounters, the dorms are almost certain to leave their impression upon her. Many a close friendship (or the opposite) has been formed between roommates. Many a discussion and interchange of ideas has extended long into the night. Living in a college dorm, with the campus involvement and utilization it entails, provides a definite enrichment of the Barnard woman's college career and greatly contributes to her own personal development.

MILBANK HALL

The Milbank Hall that Barnard freshmen entered this year was only vaguely akin to the Milbank entered by the freshmen of '71. The outside has not changed since the days when Milbank was a dorm back in 1898-02. However, the interior, newly renovated, is modern and exciting. The renovation reflects the new needs of Barnard as shown by its new seminar rooms, additional classrooms, and informal offices equipped with lounges and couches. Raised colored letters decoratively announce each department and the walls have been refreshed with a lively shade of blue.

The psychology laboratory has been revitalized, making a comfortable new home for the rats and other small animals that reside and lend their services to Barnard's future behavioral psychologists. The marble steps may still be a bit uneven, and the elevator excruciatingly slow, but Milbank's new "face-lift" is a welcome and admirable improvement.

Have some fantastic EGGLEMON soup then a spinach-cheese pie the Greek Gods eat SPANAKOTIPOPITA! For main dish try SOUVLAKIA (Greek Style Shish Kebab) and you will never forget them. Or try the exotic MOUSAKA, or the delicious PASTITSIO or Country Style Fresh Spring Baby Lamb KAPAMA or or... so many wonderfull choises. Have also a peasant style CHORIATIKI Greek Salad.
Wait for a while. Enjoy the unique experience of transformation. Contemplate on the twelve Greek Gods. Chose your own God. The God that is You! Then order some BAKLAVA & GREEK COFFEE.
Top the whole thing with a METAXA. And don't forget an OUZO for Appetizer and Golden RETSINA with your meal. Retsina is the modern version of the nectar the Greek Gods drink before they engage themselves in erotic activities, under Acropolis
